FROM HUMBLE BEGINNINGS in Holladay Hall, engineering at NC State grew to occupy several buildings on the university’s North Campus. As the College of Engineering continues its eventual complete move to Centennial Campus, many of those spaces will take on a new life. Alumni can see what the buildings where they took engineering classes are used for today and what future plans might be in store.